

EVENING SUN
JUN 14 1979

Meeting place

Rowhouse steps provide the meeting place for the families in the 100-year-old community. There is little crime.

The small, working-class community of Wagner's Point, home for about 90 families, still maintains a company-town way of life surrounded by railroad tracks and storage tanks.

"There's not too many places left in the city where you can buy a good house for $6,000," Mrs. Skrzecz said.

Evening Sun photos—Irving H. Phillips Jr.

Where imagination counts

The children of Wagner's Point entertain themselves amid parked cars and trucks, industrial debris and a scattering of trees in the shadow of hulking storage tanks.